Carbon pools recover more quickly than plant biodiversity in tropical secondary forests

Philip A. Martin1,2, Adrian C. Newton2 and James M. Bullock1

1Centre for Ecology and Hydrology, Benson Lane, Wallingford, Oxford OX10 8BB, UK
2Centre for Conservation Ecology and Environmental Science, School of Applied Sciences, Bournemouth University, Poole BH12 5BB, UK

Peer-reviewed studies from which data were collated for the meta-analysis of recovery of carbon pools and plant biodiversity in tropical secondary forests.

References
